MSW students start new program

Eight students joined Gallaudet University in a new beginning as they became its first master of social work (MSW) students this fall.

"I wonder if you really know that you are sitting here making history," said Janet Pray, chairwoman of the Department of Sociology and Social Work, which houses the program, during its student orientation held Aug. 29. Of the approximately 100 MSW programs in the United States, none has a real emphasis on deafness, said Pray. "You're here as the first group of people who will be specifically trained in the field of deafness."

The program will prepare these five deaf and three hearing students to enter the social work profession with expertise in working with deaf and hard of hearing people. Graduates will be prepared to assume leadership positions in individual, group, family, and community settings such as public welfare, medical, mental health, substance abuse, and family and child welfare agencies as well as organizations that serve aging people.

The MSW program is the result of years of discussion and analysis by the Department of Sociology and Social Work, alumni, and deaf and hearing social workers who work with deaf people, said Catherine Moses, who directs the new program.

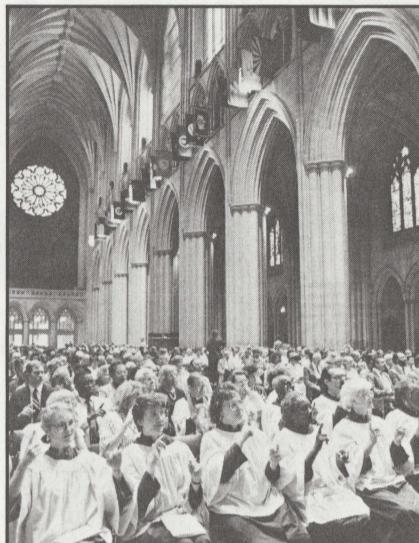

A constant concern in initial discussions of an MSW program at Gallaudet was whether graduates could find jobs in the field, said Moses. In 1978, Barbara White, a deaf woman with an MSW from the University of Maryland at Baltimore who now teaches in Gallaudet's undergraduate social work program, found a Prince George's County family services agency open to serving deaf and hearing impaired people, but she and a staff social worker had to convince the agency to hire her.

A 1985 Presidential Award enabled Gallaudet's Department of Sociology and Social Work to conduct a national survey of schools of social work, agencies with programs that served deaf clients, and Gallaudet alumni. The results showed that agencies were unable to fill current openings with master's level social workers who could sign and who were trained to work with deaf people.

Agencies also predicted that openings in this area would grow, said Moses. The agency that hired White fulfilled that prediction. Today it has more than 25 people serving hearing impaired clients.

Among the program's eight students are three from Gallaudet's undergraduate social work program, two of whom

Agreement between Gallaudet and Union to help deaf doctoral students

A new agreement between Gallaudet University and the Union Institute, based in Cincinnati, Ohio, will allow Gallaudet faculty and staff, and other hearing impaired people outside the Gallaudet community, to take advantage of doctoral studies offered through Union's graduate school.

Union offers an accredited, non-traditional program of studies leading to a Ph.D. for adult learners. The program is not campus-based, and participants have the opportunity to design and implement their own programs and work with mentors.

Although the program is open to anyone, "one of the objectives was to try to make doctoral studies more accessible to deaf individuals," said Dr. Marilyn Sass-Lehrer of Gallaudet's Department of Education, the new project coordinator.

Under the agreement, signed on Aug. 30 by the presidents and provosts of Gallaudet University and the Union Institute, both institutions will help accomplish this objective by seeking funding for interpreter assistance and other services needed by hearing impaired people who participate in the program.

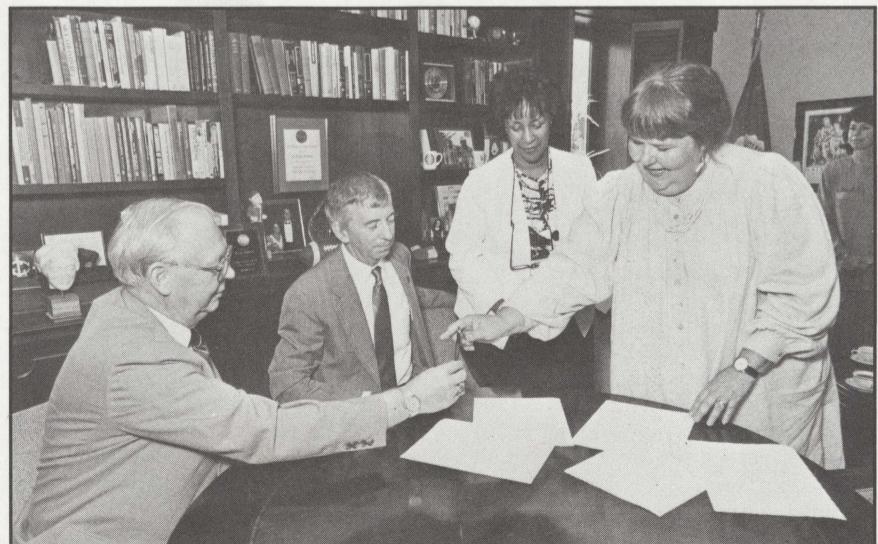

Already, the Cristina Foundation and John Yeh, president of Integrated Microcomputer Systems, have joined as partners in the agreement and have committed some start-up money for the program. They will also help pursue other avenues of funding.

Most of the initial financial support will be used for interpreters. Participants hope to develop a TDD loan bank, said Sass-Lehrer so that TDDs can be loaned to mentors to enable them to communicate with their students. They also plan to investigate ways to use computers for communication so doctoral candidates can interact with mentors in different parts of the country.

Union Institute President Robert Conley and Provost Fontaine Belford were at Gallaudet Aug. 30 to sign the agreement with Gallaudet President King Jordan and Acting Provost Ann Davidson. Dr. Bruce McMahan, board chairman and founder of the Cristina Foundation; Dr. Yvette Marin, Cristina's president and co-founder; and Yeh were also on hand. After the agreement was signed, the group took a brief tour of Gallaudet, learning about the ENFI program from Dr. Trent Battson, seeing Gallaudet's archives and

'Ole Jim' lunch program begins

Faculty and staff will again have the opportunity to eat lunch in "Ole Jim" beginning this Friday, Sept. 15. Lunch will be offered on a one-semester trial basis every Friday from noon to 1:30 p.m. on the upper level of "Ole Jim," with an international menu each week.

"Ole Jim" used to have a luncheon program, but it was forced to close due to an insufficient number of patrons.

Whether or not the luncheon program succeeds will depend on how many people eat in "Ole Jim" every Friday. DAKA, the food service providing the lunch, said that between 50 and 60 customers will be needed each week.

An international menu will be offered every week, beginning with a Mexican lunch this Friday. The Mexican menu will consist of a choice of two entrees—enchiladas with cheese or chili—along with tossed salad, Mexican-style rice, refried beans, cake, and iced tea or coffee. The lunch will cost $5.95 per person. Following weeks will feature Italian, German, Chinese, and American cuisine, plus barbecue.

Each Monday, On The Green will print the menu for the following Friday's lunch.

If campus departments or individuals plan to have luncheon meetings of six or more people, please call "Ole Jim" at x5060 and inform the staff so that DAKA can prepare an adequate amount of food.

The luncheon program will be held every Friday for one semester, and if attendance is good, it may continue through the second semester. This will probably be the last attempt to revive the luncheon program in "Ole Jim," so now it's up to the campus community to show its support.

Computer Services short courses

Computer Services will offer the following courses to students, staff, and faculty this fall. The office is experimenting this semester by making these short courses more available to students. The dates and times of the courses, and registration information, will appear in the October issue of the Gallaudet Computing newsletter.

WordPerfect—Level 1

Version 5.0

Gain a thorough working knowledge of WordPerfect through hands-on exercises, including basic text entry, formatting skills, centering, help, justification, print, save, block copy, block move, bold, underlining, paragraph numbering, and reveal codes commands. No prior WordPerfect experience required.

WordPerfect—Level 2

Version 5.0

Improve your basic skills in WordPerfect and learn more advanced techniques, including searches, speller, thesaurus, footnotes, outlining, double spacing, and basic sorting. Prior experience using WordPerfect required.

dBase III + —Level 1

Become familiar with dBase III + database management program terminology and concepts. Hands-on exercises include creating/using/modifying a dBase file, displaying data, relational operators, editing records, and built-in functions. No previous dBase experience required.

dBase III + —Level 2

Become familiar with more advanced dBase III + features including the sort, index, locate, find, and seek commands, mailing labels, memory variables, command files, printer output, and custom reports creation and printing.

Prerequisites include either dBase II + —Level 1 or a good working knowledge of dBase.

Introduction to Personal Computers

Topics include introduction to selected Disk Operating System Commands, directories/subdirectories, a line editor (EDLIN), a word processor (Writing Assistant), and using a printer. No lectures are included, and no experience is required. Individualized instruction.

Introduction to Networks

This course provides an introduction to BITNet, Ethernet, Internet and DECNet. Includes electronic mail, file exchange, and remote login.

Introduction to ULTRIX

The class provides an introduction to VAX ULTRIX-32, the Digital Equipment Corporation offering of the UNIX operating system. Includes hands-on instruction in the use of a fundamental set of operating system commands and editor commands.

Introduction to VAX

Learn the basic features of the VAX/VMS system, including log-in/logout procedures, system utilities, basic commands, printing, and electronic mail. No prior experience necessary.

Lotus 123

An overview of 123's capabilities will be discussed. Samples will be provided throughout the class. No prior 123 experience necessary.

have been working at the National Health Care Foundation for the Deaf's Otis House, which provides housing, supervision, and care for mentally ill deaf adults. Other students possess a wide variety of work experience and undergraduate education.

Students must complete 63 hours of course and field work and can specialize in working with deaf or aging people. The aging specialization was developed with help from a grant from the Department of Health and Human Services' Administration on Aging.

Moses explained the rationale for this concentration. "All deaf people become old, and most hearing people become deaf or hard of hearing as they become older," she said.

Most students will spend four semesters completing the program, while a few with bachelor's degrees in social work from programs accredited by the Council on Social Work Education may be eligible to waive up to 15 credits.

"When you finish you will be prepared to go in a variety of paths, not just one," Moses told students at the orientation. "And you'll have to think of your learning as always continuing; it never stops."

Dr. Robert Williams, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, urged the students to take advantage of the many opportunities Gallaudet offers. Dr. Patrick Gleason and Mary Ann Klein, assistant professors in the program, and Evelyn Wolstein, director of field instruction, also welcomed the students.

White, too, stopped by to wish the students well. "This has been a dream for many of us for 10 years or more," she said.

Among Ourselves

The Gallaudet Dance Company, under the direction of Dr. Diane Hotten-dorf, performed with Bob McGrath of "Sesame Street" at the main Wolf Trap stage Sept. 1, 2, and 3 as part of the International Children's Festival. The Gallaudet dancers and some of the children who are students at the National Deaf Dance Academy also performed together for the first time, as they joined McGrath for "It's Not Easy Being Green" and signed other songs with the entire cast. The festival was sponsored by Fairfax County and Wolf Trap.

Gallaudet University's ENFI Project (Electronic Networks For Interaction) and Dr. Trent Batson, professor in the English Department, will receive one of three Best Curriculum Innovation awards given annually at the EDUCOM conference to be held Oct. 16-19 at the University of Michigan. The award includes $5,000, which Batson will use with matching funds from other contributors to seed ENFI-related work within deaf education. EDUCOM, a national computing association for colleges and universities, joins with the National Center for Research in Postsecondary Teaching and Learning to give the awards, and they will distribute a videotape of the award-winning projects nationally.

The Sociolinguistics of the Deaf Community, edited by Dr. Ceil Lucas, assistant professor in the Department of Linguistics and Interpreting, was published recently by Academic Press. The book includes articles written by Lucas, Clayton Valli, Jeffrey Davis, Cynthia Roy, Dr. Robert E. Johnson, and Dr. Carol Erting, all with the Department of Linguistics and Interpreting. Other Gallaudet employees whose work is included are Susan Mather, a research associate at the Center for Studies in Education and Human Development, and Elizabeth Nowell, an English language trainer with the English Language Institute in the School of Preparatory Studies.

Alexander Quaynor, an instructor with the English Language Institute in the School of Preparatory Studies, recently received an employee service award for his 10 years of service to the University. Quaynor, who was born in Ghana and raised in Nigeria, received his bachelor's degree from Gallaudet in 1975. After years working for the Gallaudet Research Institute, Quaynor joined the ELI staff last year and now helps foreign students like himself achieve English proficiency.

Union offers interdisciplinary program deafness collection, and being interviewed for Gallaudet Television's "Deaf Mosaic" program.

Union's graduate school offers an interdisciplinary program of doctoral studies, and participants—called "learners" instead of "students" to denote that the process is active, not passive—must focus on at least two areas of study. Learners can choose their own areas of study, which may range from anthropology to communication to creative arts to women's studies.

Learners also put together their own plan of study, which can include workshops, seminars, mentorships, and research. "It includes lots of different options for approaches," said Sasse Lehrer. "It's really creative. Individuals can identify ways that match their learning styles."

Graduates of Union's doctoral program include college presidents and professors, government leaders, and scientists. Some Gallaudet employees are already participating in the program.

Organizers will soon establish a liaison committee, composed of two faculty members and one administrator from each institution. One job of the committee will be to nominate individuals to serve as core faculty members for the program. Under the agreement, two Gallaudet employees are entitled to serve as core faculty of Union's graduate school, holding dual appointments at both institutions and serving as mentors for a limited number of learners. Opportunities will also be available for Gallaudet faculty to serve as adjunct faculty members for individual learners.

In connection with the cooperative agreement, Gallaudet will hold at least one colloquium and two seminars each year on the Gallaudet campus.

Sasse Lehrer is available to answer questions about the program and help with applications. She can be called at x5530.

Gallaudet University is an equal opportunity employer/educational institution and does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, sex, national origin, religion, age, disability, or veteran status in employment or admission to its programs and activities.

New association formed to serve adults with special learning needs

A new national association serving the education of adults with special learning needs has been formed, becoming the first organization in the field.

The National Association for Adults with Special Learning Needs (NAASLN) was organized at the Second National Conference for Adults with Special Learning Needs, held in City of Industry, Calif., Aug. 9-12.

The creation of the organization is "the development of a new profession, with an emphasis on lifelong education for adults with special learning needs," said Dr. Boris Bogatz, director of Gallaudet's Programs in Adult and Continuing Education (PACE) and NAASLN president.

The formation of NAASLN was a highlight of the national conference, which was sponsored by Gallaudet, the American Association of Adult and Continuing Education, and the California State Departments of Education and Developmental Disabilities. The conference focused on methods for coordinating efforts among all service providers to improve learning opportunities for adults who are mentally and physically challenged.

Bogatz called the birth of NAASLN "truly exciting. [It] provides us with the opportunity to actively and aggressively impact on the field of lifelong learning and adult education for the millions of Americans who have special learning needs."

NAASLN was formed as an outgrowth of the First National Congress for adults with Special Learning Needs, held at Gallaudet in 1987. At that congress, a commitment was made to address the needs of adults with special learning problems. That commitment led to the idea to form the organization.

Specifically, the association's mission, Bogatz said, will be collaboration among professionals, advocates, and consumers in the field of adults with special learning needs to provide better opportunities for this population. Some of the ways that are envisioned to achieve this are to encourage research and development; clarify the roles of professionals serving the population and provide more workshops and training programs for these professionals; promote adult basic education/literacy; and serve as advocates—encouraging the development of materials, resources and programs to promote the educational needs of these adults.

A major activity that will solidify NAASLN's goals and the course it takes to pursue them will be the 1990 national conference, slated for Aug. 14-19 in Orlando, Fla.

At this early stage, NAASLN is national in scope, but Bogatz said that interest is already being expressed by professionals in the field in other countries and that people everywhere are being encouraged to join the 100 charter members who make up the association.

For more information about NAASLN or the 1990 conference, Bogatz can be called at x5044.

Gallaudet Workout classes begin

This fall's Gallaudet Workout, sponsored by the Department of Physical Education and Recreation, begins this week and continues through Dec. 15.

The Gallaudet Workout is a program of exercise classes designed for deaf, hard of hearing, and hearing individuals. The aerobics classes are called "fat burners" to denote the high energy format of the class, although the student has the option to do either low or high impact movements. The body conditioning and toning class emphasizes floor work, strengthening exercises, and stretching movements.

A new "waterworks" class has been added this fall for people who are looking for something different. This workout, taught by Cindi Olson, includes aerobic movements in the water.

Gallaudet Workout instructors include Gina Oliva, Cindi Olson, and Pattie Cinelli (all certified by IDEA), Suzanne Scott, Cindy Read, Priscilla Krisman, Regina Pradier, Randy Pannell, and Debbie White. White, an undergraduate student, and Pannell, who works in the Department of Education, are new this semester. They were trained to teach as a team as a project of the Aerobics and Fitness Training Institute of the Deaf, headed by Gina Oliva.

Tickets good through the fall session can be purchased from Stacey Minich in the Field House, Room 101, between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Students who attend 42 or more classes during the semester will receive a free pair of Avia aerobic shoes, and those attending 21 classes will receive the newly-designed Gallaudet Workout t-shirt.

Noon classes meet in the Hughes Gym dance studio; evening classes meet in the Field House adaptive room; and waterworks sessions meet in the Hughes Gym pool.

Classes are as follows:

Monday

12:05-12:55 p.m.—"Fat Burner" Workout
5:50 p.m.—Body Conditioning/Toning

Tuesday

12:05-12:55 p.m.—Body Conditioning/Toning

New Gallaudet Visa card available

Gallaudet faculty, staff, students, alumni, and friends can now apply for a new Gallaudet Visa card through Dominion Bank.

The card, which features a color photograph of Chapel Hall and the University name and symbol, is available at no annual fee for the first year; after that, the annual fee is $18. The annual interest rate is 14 percent through Jan. 31, 1990, and 17.39 percent after that.

Each time cardholders make a purchase with the Visa card, Gallaudet will receive a contribution of .5 percent of every dollar charged. The University will also receive $4 of the annual card fees. Half of the money received will be applied to the Gallaudet University Alumni Association endowment; the other half will be used to support special programs in the School of Education and Human Services to prepare teachers, counselors, and other leaders in deaf education.

The new Gallaudet Visa card was made possible through a special arrangement between Gallaudet's Office of Alumni Relations and Advancement, and Dominion Bank. Applications for the card are available in the Development Office, located in the Learning Center Annex, or by calling Angie Hollingsworth at x6509.

Decisions about applications and credit limits are made by Dominion Bank, not by Gallaudet. Dominion can be called at 1-800-937-0119 (TDD).

Announcements

A memorial service for Rev. Raymond Richards, a former Gallaudet chaplain for the campus and a faculty member in the Department of Philosophy and Religion who died recently, will be held this Thursday, Sept. 14, at 4 p.m. in Chapel Hall. Contrary to earlier information obtained about Rev. Richard's death as reported in the Aug. 21 issue of On the Green, the priest died on July 28 in the intensive care unit of Mary Immaculate Hospital in Jamaica, Queens, N.Y., from a form of Legionnaire's pneumonia which he contracted during a visit to Italy earlier that month.

Fall hours for the Gallaudet library, located in Merrill Learning Center, are regular semester hours—Mon.-Thur., 8 a.m.-midnight; Fri., 8 a.m.-10 p.m.; Sat., 9 a.m.-10 p.m.; Sun., 1 p.m.-midnight. Thanksgiving recess (Nov. 22-26)—Wed., 8 a.m.-6 p.m.; Thur., closed; Fri., 8 a.m.-6 p.m.; Sat.-Sun., regular hours.

The location of Sign Communication's "Fingertalk I" class, previously listed in the Aug. 21 On the Green, has been changed. The class will be held in MN-12 of Merrill Learning Center. Also, Sign Communication is offering evening and weekend non-degree credit sign language classes this fall. ASL I, II, and III classes will be held Mondays and Wednesdays, Sept. 18-Dec. 4, from 6:30-8:30 p.m., and Saturday classes will meet Sept. 16-Dec. 16, from 9:15 a.m.-12:45 p.m. ASL IV will be offered on Mondays and Wednesdays only. For more information contact Ethlyn DeStefano, x5200.

Open season for the new life insurance program with Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. (MET), which includes free, employer-paid basic life insurance, runs through Oct. 6. All regular status employees are eligible to participate. Three options are being offered: remain with Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance (FEGLI) if currently enrolled; cancel FEGLI and enroll with MET; or enroll with MET for at least the free portion of the life insurance. Enrollment forms are due in the Personnel Office, College Hall, Rm. 7, on Oct. 6, by 4 p.m. For more information, call Elaine Vance at x5111.

Ten-week dance classes for deaf and hearing children ages 4-12 will be offered by the National Dance Academy of the Deaf beginning Sept. 23. All classes are on Saturday mornings at Gallaudet and include ballet, jazz, sign and tap, and ballet/tumbling for tots. The cost is $35 per class, or $85 for three classes. For more information and to register, call Sue Gill x5492/x5591 (V/TDD).

A panel of deaf women will present a discussion entitled "Sexual Violence and Deaf Women" as part of the D.C. Rape Crisis Center's 11th annual Anti-Rape Week, Sept. 16-22, from 7 to 9 p.m. Sept. 18 in MSSD's orientation room. For more information about the week's activities, look for flyers that have been posted around campus, or call the center at 232-9789 (V), or 328-1371 (TDD).

Administration and Supervision offers fall classes for faculty and staff

The Department of Administration and Supervision is offering several courses this fall for faculty, staff, and administrators.

All employees who have a bachelor's, master's, or doctoral degree and who are interested in improving their management and leadership skills can sign up for any of the following courses:

- School Law (ADM-895-L), Saturdays, 9 a.m.-noon, Dr. Bill McCrone. Designed to provide legal literacy skills to educational leaders, particularly professionals planning to work in states requiring school law courses.

- Issues in the Administration of Special Education Programs (ADM 821), Wednesdays, 3:30-6:30 p.m., Dr. Terry Berkeley. Covers recent issues in special education affecting national and state-level policy.

- Advanced Seminar in Educational Administration (ADM 841), Mondays, 6:30-8 p.m., Dr. Tom Landers. Discusses the educational, legislative, and personal implications of being an administrator.

- Organization and Administration of Higher Education (ADM 895-H), Tuesdays, 6:30-8 p.m., Dr. Tom Landers. Beneficial for anyone seeking a position in higher education.

- Management of Writing for Administrators (ADM 796), Fridays, 1:30-4 p.m., Dr. Bill Marshall. Analyzes style, tone, and writing attitude to help administrators learn to write clearly and simply.

- Theory of Management and Organization for Special Education Administrators, Thursdays, 5:30, Dr. Bill Marshall. Discusses leadership style, personality attributes, and development of a management philosophy.

Classes are beginning now, so interested people should register as soon as possible with the Department of Administration and Supervision, Fowler Hall, Room 203, x5525.

Students talk with Gallaudet chaplains at the Office of Campus Ministries table during the student services fair held Aug. 29. Twenty-three services were displayed at the fair.
